Portfolio performance review

The 4D Global Infrastructure Fund (Hedged) was down 1.49% net in April, under-performing the benchmark's return of 0.76% (by 2.25%) and the FTSE 50/50 Infrastructure Index which was down 0.8%.

The strongest performer for April was Mexican Airport operator GAP up 16.9%. This was a rebound off an oversold position as strong Q1 results reassured the market on the strength and resilience of the business model in what could prove to be a difficult year operationally.

The weakest performer in April was US communications operator, SBA Communications down 14.1% in the month on refinancing concerns in a higher for longer environment.

Markets remain volatile on the outlook for inflation, interest rates and economic growth. Most developed market Central Banks are at peak policy rates, with market expectations of rate cuts in 2024 being pared back from the aggressive levels seen at the start of the year. The pace of disinflation has slowed, but the delayed impact of high interest rates on economic growth may yet to fully be seen. There remains a fine balancing act between holding rates in restrictive territory too long and hitting activity – and loosening too quickly before inflation is sustainably within target ranges. Listed infrastructure, as an asset class, fundamentally can do well in either scenario - with explicit or implicit inflation hedges and long-term predictable earnings profiles underpinned by contract or regulation.

Month in review

Global equity markets returned to a risk off mood in April, with equity and bond markets down the most since September 2023 and MSCI World (Local) down 3.15%. Geopolitics, inflation and delayed rate cut expectations were the main drivers of the weakness. In a reversal of prior months performance, emerging market equities outperformed developed market equities.

In the US, bond yields rose, breaking through 4.7% and closing in on 5% levels seen in October 2023. The main driver was renewed signs that high inflation is remaining persistent, with the third month in a row of higher-than-expected monthly core inflation. The monthly read of 0.4% in March took annual inflation to 3.5% from 3.2% in February. On the Fed's preferred measure, the Personal Consumption Expenditure (PCE) inflation data, it also ticked higher to 2.7%. Shelter inflation remains high and not falling is expected, whilst services inflation is ticking up. Market pricing for Fed cuts has been pushed out, with the market pricing in only 1 cut in 2024 by month end, from 6 cuts at the start of the year. US GDP was lower than expected in Q1 at 1.6%, vs expectations of 2.5% and 3.4% in Q4 2023.

In Australia, higher inflation for Q1 was above both the market and RBA's expectations, which turned market pricing in a small chance of a rate hike this year. CPI was 4% year on year for core CPI, with services inflation continuing to pressure prices.

In the UK, the economy is picking up steam from two negative quarters in Q3/4'23, with the Composite Purchasing Manager's Index in expansionary territory at 54 in April, driven by the service sector. The ECB continues to flag its intention to cut rates, with a June cut a possibility. Eurozone inflation is running at 2.4% in April and March, with higher rates having a greater impact on economic growth in the region.

The slowing of disinflation amongst major economies seen in Chart 1 has meant that economies are still sitting above central bank inflation targets, except for the ECB who are expected to cut rates first this year. The central banks have to tread a fine balance between the long and variable lag's of restrictive monetary policy on the economy, and not getting lower inflation sustainably "on track".

China rallied in April, up 6.4%, on a combination of historically low relative valuation, ongoing aid and stimulus for stabilising the property market, as well as stabilising of domestic activity. Strong Q124 GDP of 5.3% year on year, and stronger manufacturing and infrastructure investment, also added to the positive turn of sentiment.

On the geopolitical front, there were heightened tensions as Israel and Iran tensions escalated beyond rhetoric. Thankfully, the confrontation was contained soothing market fears with oil closing the month below $82, down 6% from its April highs. The US Congress also passed a Ukraine aid package, which should buy more time for Ukraine to defend itself amid worsening conditions on the frontline.
